Introduction

Tourists as Victims

- “Tourists are less likely to pay attention to security issues while on vacation, and more willing to take risks, or to visit unfamiliar environments.” (Brás, 2015)

Tourists may face danger when;

- Accidentally place themselves in a wrong spot and on the wrong timing,
- Lack knowledge about what may cause them victimised,
- The likelihood of them reporting the case to the police is low,
- Those criminals justify themselves due to tourists' financial advantage

Conclusion

Crime against tourists is often organised and may be difficult for a lay person to deal with it by only themselves.

Yet, with all these theories and proper regulation, decreasing the total amount of cases may not be as difficult as people would imagine.

Therefore, so as to mitigate the cases, action from governments may be required.
